"We are grateful for our partnership with Interfaith Community Services, who stepped up alongside Feeding San Diego to ensure families had access to essential food during last year's government shutdown. Together, we demonstrated the power of collaboration, providing stability and support for neighbors facing uncertainty."

– Sam Duke, Director of Programs, Feeding San Diego

Imagine that your close friend is about to lose their housing. A three-day eviction notice arrives: Pay or Get Out. They ask if you can foster their pet because they can't care for them in their car and still go to work. Your apartment doesn't allow pets. You watch them say goodbye.

Greg Anglea
Cohn Family CEO Chair
Chief Executive Officer,
Interfaith Community Services

These past few years have really been hard with the soaring cost of living. You help friends and family as best as you can, though there are times when you need help too. You're facing the same challenges, working overtime, accessing emergency food pantries, and taking side jobs to stay afloat.

Imagine another family, one fortunate enough to purchase a home less than a decade ago, with a 3% mortgage that costs less than the rent on a two-bedroom apartment. Their expenses climbed too, but steady, salaried work and a retirement account, which has nearly doubled in recent years, have left them financially secure and able to help others.

This is where Interfaith Community Services comes in. Our People for People Fund connects neighbors with resources and compassion to those facing crisis, providing hope and security when it is needed most. Interfaith is deeply grateful to those who place their trust in us when they have nowhere else to turn, and to those who give generously to support our work. Together, we help one another – People for People.

Our community has faced tremendous challenges this year, and we will face more in the years ahead. This is why Interfaith was created: to bring us together in support of one another and a better future.

Together, We Rise.

I am honored to serve as Board Chair of Interfaith Community Services as we address the complex challenges of poverty, substance use, homelessness, and food insecurity across North County with compassion and practical solutions.

Justin Apger
Board Chair,
Interfaith Community Services

This has been a challenging year for everyone in social and community services. Rising costs, federal policy changes with local consequences, and deep cuts to public funding have increased the need for help while straining the organizations that provide it. Even so, Interfaith has responded with purpose and remained focused on helping people build more stable lives.

Recently, we completed the 2027–2031 Strategic Plan, providing a clear roadmap for our programs, governance, funding, and policy engagement. As conditions keep shifting, we have a thoughtful plan to ensure Interfaith remains a sustainable organization and trusted partner prepared for what comes next.

We're also seeing what strong municipal partnerships can accomplish. Our Withdrawal Management program in Escondido has served more than 800 people since its expansion in March 2025. Local leaders have recognized it as a primary strategy contributing to an 11.7% reduction in homelessness in Escondido from the previous year. We're also establishing and expanding housing, shelter, outreach, and basic needs services with government and community partners in Vista, Oceanside, Carlsbad, and across North County.

None of this happens alone. Our staff, donors, foundations, faith communities, businesses, and government partners strengthen our ability to respond today while building capacity for the future. Interfaith is well-positioned to deepen these relationships, welcome new partners, and expand what we can accomplish together.

Thank you for giving your time, resources, and trust to Interfaith. I am energized by what we have built and the opportunities ahead.

Together, we will keep helping our neighbors build stable, hopeful lives.

TOGETHER WE HEAL

TURK RECUPERATIVE CARE

Recovery doesn't end when someone leaves the hospital. Having the right care and support during the days and weeks that follow can make all the difference.

The Abraham and Lillian Turk Recuperative Care Center provides critical support to residents as they recover from surgery or illness. Our 30-member staff includes a program manager, site supervisors, case managers, clinical therapists, nurses, residential behavioral health aides, site safety coordinators, environmental services staff, and a resident support assistant.

Our nurses provide on-site support through medicine and diagnosis education and coordinating with patients' clinical teams. Meanwhile, their case managers connect clients to resources regarding housing, benefits, and community programs. They also work together with our clinical therapists to help residents meet their treatment goals. Together, each staff member collaborates to ensure our residents thrive in and out of the program.

NEIGHBORHOOD HEALTHCARE

Bringing care directly to our Escondido headquarters helps make essential services accessible.

Through our long-term partnership with Neighborhood Healthcare, Interfaith provides critical services and healthcare enrollment to the community. Neighborhood Healthcare has an office at our Escondido headquarters, ensuring healthcare is accessible to the people we serve.

The eight-member team sees an average of 55 to 60 patients each day and includes a therapist and a nurse practitioner. The team provides primary care, behavioral health, women's health, and lab services.

The partnership also helps streamline Interfaith's substance use disorder services by clearing new clients for our Withdrawal Management program.

RECOVERY AND WELLNESS

Recovery begins when someone is met with compassion, support, and a path forward.

Interfaith's Recovery and Wellness Center (RWC) provides comprehensive substance use disorder (SUD) treatment to community members. But Interfaith's commitment to those experiencing SUD extends beyond treatment. Through outreach, case management, and sober living, individuals have access to wraparound services that support them throughout their journey.

Our SUD services staff help clients every step of the way. Tristan Woodward (center photo) is a SUD Counselor in our Withdrawal Management program, providing residents a beacon of light as they begin their sobriety. Alongside Tristan is his companion and medical alert dog, Shadow. While Shadow is here to support Tristan, her unconditional love extends to the residents. She brings joy and happiness to everyone she meets, brightening their days during their darkest moments. Together, Tristan and Shadow wear their hearts on their sleeves and go above and beyond for the people they serve.

Tristan and Shadow work with me on every level, and you can tell he really cares. Petting Shadow makes all the stress and anxiety of the day just melt away.

– Interfaith Client

From the first connection to the next chapter, support matters at every step.

Through collaboration across departments, Interfaith provides wraparound SUD services throughout the community. SAMHSA outreach teams meet individuals in the field and connect them with Interfaith's two-week Withdrawal Management program. From there, clients transition into the 90-day residential treatment program. By working together, these programs provide comprehensive sobering services designed to create lasting change and help clients graduate ready to continue their sobriety journey.

Interfaith's commitment to people experiencing SUD reaches beyond Escondido.

At the Carlsbad Service Center, that commitment takes the form of outreach and education for community members along the coast. The center provides screenings, referrals, SUD education and treatment connections, and peer support. Through a contract with the City of Carlsbad, dedicated outreach staff also meet people in the field and link them with recovery facilities, including our RWC, helping bring treatment within reach.

OCEANSIDE NAVIGATION CENTER

A safe place to stay can provide the stability needed to begin moving forward.

Interfaith has now completed its first full year as operator of the Oceanside Navigation Center (ONC), providing Oceanside residents with a safe, welcoming place to stay while working toward self-sufficiency. This year, the shelter expanded from 50 to 75 beds, allowing Interfaith to serve even more people. Partnerships with local organizations and the City of Oceanside have also continued to grow, strengthening the services and support available to the community.

In a matter of days, Gloria found herself grieving a loss and facing an uncertain future.

Gloria was safely housed while working as an in-home caregiver for a sweet elderly man. When her patient suddenly passed away, she was left devastated having lost both someone she cared for and her home. Soon after, she was welcomed to ONC where she worked with Interfaith staff to regain self-sufficiency. While here, she connected with family who welcomed her with open arms. We provided her with a plane ticket so she could reunify with her family while awaiting acceptance to an assisted living facility. Now, Gloria is on her feet, surrounded by people who love her, and ready for the next chapter of her life.

ENCAMPMENT RESOLUTION FUND

Reaching people where they are can be the first step toward housing and stability.

Interfaith is proud to partner with the cities of Oceanside and Carlsbad through the Encampment Resolution Fund. The cities received a $20 million state grant to address homeless encampments by building relationships with residents and connecting them with programs throughout the county, including local shelters, SUD residential programs, recuperative care centers, and permanent housing. Since the program began, Interfaith and its city partners have helped house more than 80 people from these encampments, demonstrating the important role these programs can play in helping people move toward stable housing.

CARLSBAD SERVICE CENTER

Sometimes the most effective response to homelessness is helping prevent it from happening in the first place.

This year, Interfaith's Carlsbad Service Center (CSC) shifted its focus toward homelessness prevention and diversion. In addition to basic needs, food and hygiene assistance, and mail services, CSC helps individuals and families remain housed and avoid entering the shelter system. Through case management, rental and utility assistance, landlord mediation, and other support, the center helps community members address immediate challenges while working toward longer-term stability.

SENIORS

For seniors facing hardship, the right help matters.

Seniors are served throughout Interfaith's many programs. From home repairs and rental assistance to temporary shelter and permanent supportive housing, Interfaith helps older adults access the resources, care, and support they need.

George's story unfolded across several programs, agencies, and helping hands.

George Owens, 77, had been living in his vehicle for nearly five years when Interfaith's Vehicular Homeless Outreach Team (VHOP) met him. Staff helped him reconnect with his out-of-state daughter and, when his vehicle was impounded, provided a motel voucher for temporary housing.

Within days, George moved to another agency's shelter and entered a rapid rehousing program. Two months later, he secured a room at an independent living facility, allowing him to remain in the community he had long called home.

FAMILY SERVICES

Every family deserves the stability of a place to call home.

Helping families move beyond homelessness remains a vital part of Interfaith's work. From shelter to rehousing programs, Interfaith helps parents and children regain stability and move forward. The Family Homelessness team works to divert families from shelter whenever possible, helping them secure permanent housing through partnerships with local property managers and rental assistance. Whether it's preventing homelessness before it happens or diverting a family through emergency assistance, our teams work hard toward our goal to End Homelessness One Family at a Time.

GRANTS PER DIEM (GPD) AND VETERAN RECUPERATIVE CARE

For a decade, this partnership has helped bring behavioral health care directly to Veterans where they are.

For the past 10 years, the May and Stanley Smith Charitable Trust has supported integrated behavioral health services within Interfaith's transitional housing programs for Veterans experiencing homelessness. The trust funds on-site clinical therapists and interns in our Grants Per Diem (GPD) and Veteran Recuperative Care programs, expanding access to behavioral health care as veterans work toward greater independence.

For Stevie, addressing his mental health became an important part of moving forward.

After years of living with severe mental illness, Stevie entered Interfaith's Grants Per Diem (GPD) program. Working with his case manager, he focused on obtaining a HUD-Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing (HUD-VASH) voucher and securing permanent employment. At the same time, regular sessions with an on-site clinical therapist helped him better understand and manage his mental health conditions. Stevie credits both his case manager and therapist with helping him reach his goals.

Today, Stevie has his own apartment and volunteers at a local store. With the resources and tools he gained at Interfaith, he is building a life on his own terms.

"I got tremendous help in understanding my disability through the therapy. I wouldn't have been successful in my recovery without it"

KIND THREADS RESALE APPAREL

A resale shop with a purpose that reaches far beyond its doors.

Kind Threads Resale Apparel in San Marcos continues to grow since opening last November. Through in-store events and pop-up shops across the county, the store has connected new audiences with Interfaith's mission, with every purchase supporting its social services programs.

With just one full-time employee, Kind Threads relies largely on volunteers. Located in North City, right next to the Cal State San Marcos campus, the store naturally engages and inspires a new generation of compassionate leaders.

Clarissa Sanchez, a first-generation commuter student, joined Kind Threads to complete service learning hours for a psychology class. As her first-ever work experience, the opportunity has helped her build new skills and gain confidence while connecting with customers and the community.

"Not only do I love clothes, but also the opportunity to help people in the community."

– Clarissa

TOGETHER WE GROW

INTERFAITH'S EDUCATION HUB

Learning creates opportunities to better serve one another.

Through the Education Hub, Interfaith provides community training, experiential learning, continuing education, mental health education, and leadership development programs. In partnership with local schools, organizations, and faith communities, the Education Hub delivers practical, evidence-informed training that strengthens individuals, families, and communities across North San Diego County.

Interested in attending or hosting a class? Visit interfaithservices.org/education-hub to browse our courses and fill out an interest form.

VOLUNTEERS AND INTERNS

The people who give their time and talents help make Interfaith's work possible.

Volunteers bring compassion and dedication to Interfaith through special events, daily and weekly service, and programs like Summer of Service Kids Edition. In every role, their contributions support Interfaith's work and make a meaningful difference for the people and communities served.

Interns also play an important role while gaining hands-on experience in their chosen fields. Working alongside experienced staff, they develop their skills, contribute to Interfaith's programs, and build connections with the people they serve.

What began as an opportunity to learn grew into a place to build a career.

Sydnie came to Interfaith as a social work intern, gaining firsthand experience in compassionate, client-centered care while building relationships with clients and helping them work toward their goals. The experience strengthened her commitment to social work and ultimately opened the door to a new chapter at Interfaith. Sydnie has now joined the Rapid Rehousing team, where she will continue supporting individuals and families as they work toward housing stability.

"My internship reminded me why I chose social work and showed me how much I value building relationships with clients and supporting them in reaching their goals."

TOGETHER WE BELIEVE

FAITH COMMUNITIES

NUMBER OF GENERAL
MEMBER FAITH COMMUNITIES

Since Interfaith's beginning, faith communities have turned a shared commitment to service into meaningful action.

Interfaith was founded in 1979 by a diverse group of faith communities united by a desire to serve neighbors in need. More than four decades later, that foundation remains an important part of Interfaith's work. Today, more than 130 faith communities make up Interfaith's General Membership, supporting programs through donations, volunteer service, and a shared commitment to the community.

When a need arose, one congregation answered in a big way.

This year, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints made a deep impact on the people we serve. After learning that food donations have been declining this year, their congregation came together to fill the gap. With a semi-truck filled with approximately 40,000 pounds of non-perishable food, such as dry pasta, beans, and peanut butter, they ensured families and individuals can continue to have access to essential food.

Creating a home takes more than a set of keys.

The Chalice Unitarian Universalist Congregation came together for a second year to support Interfaith's Make It a Home program, providing a $30,000 Spirit Level Foundation Grant for new mattresses and bed frames, plus $15,000 for kitchen supplies. Their generosity equips clients with household essentials as they settle into new homes. Chalice's commitment doesn't stop there. Every Tuesday, a dedicated team of their volunteers comes to our warehouse to organize and pack for that week's client move-ins.

FOUNDATIONS & DONORS

When circumstances change, a community can choose to step forward.

PEOPLE FOR PEOPLE

As shifts in federal funding and public policy reshape the resources many people rely on, San Diego's philanthropic community has stepped forward. In late 2025, the region's largest foundations formed United for San Diego in response to significant cuts to publicly funded programs. Against this backdrop, a transformative investment from Price Philanthropies helped launch Interfaith's People for People campaign, joined by lead gifts from the San Diego Foundation Unity Fund, David C. Copley Foundation, and Linden Root Dickinson Foundation. These early investments helped inspire more than 2,600 donors across the region to join the effort.

Honoring our 2026 Saemi Award Recipient, Carol Lazier

True service begins with seeing the world through someone else's eyes. For Carol Lazier, that belief has shaped years of service to Interfaith Community Services. Since joining the Board of Directors in 2019, Carol has brought empathy and compassion to her leadership, philanthropy, and advocacy. She has helped guide Interfaith through periods of change and growth, providing thoughtful leadership while helping strengthen the organization for the future. Carol's philanthropy reflects that same commitment, supporting food and basic needs, holiday assistance for families, diversity and racial equity, and flexible funding that allows Interfaith to respond where the need is greatest. Interfaith is proud to honor Carol with the 2026 Saemi Award in recognition of her compassion, leadership, and dedication to the community.
